As part of the bond measure overwhelmingly passed by the voters in November 2000 and the recent passage of Proposition D, the San Francisco Public Library is renovating the Presidio Branch Library.

The Presidio Branch was seismically upgraded and made accessible in the early 1990s. As discussed at our last meeting, the upcoming renovation will concentrate on complying with current code requirements and remodeling the interior while preserving the historic character of the building. Plans include a larger, distinct teen area, new furniture, more functional staff areas, additional computers, and much more.

The branch is scheduled to close for construction in summer 2009 and reopen in 2010.

Meet the architects and comment on plans for the branch.
