1	Synopsis
2	Some things I was thinking about at 28.
3
4	Set in New York and London, 5050 is about a relationship, a reflection on love gone wrong, and dual responsibility; an argument, a separation, and the nature of love are explored in images and text, cut like a music video with a jazz rhythm.
5	A day by day account of November 1978 in San Francisco, covering Jonestown and the City Hall murders.
6	Back to Bed is a playful story of seduction & yearning. It is about calling your lover or lovers back into your bed.
7	a film about a lesbian's two-year odyssey with infertility and donor insemination.
8
9	A male couple questions love and light bulbs over laundry.
10	A doc about true identity with a musical twist.
11	From her first day of competition, reigning downhill mountain bike champion Michelle Dumaresq has been skaing up the world of sports. But it's not because of her riding talent - it's beacuse for the first 20 years of her life Michelle was Michael.
12	11 year old Lilly is desperatly in love with her classmate Claudia who has a crush on Lilly's horrible brother .
13	The lives of 101 male hustlers on the famous Santa Monica strip as seen through their eyes.

52	Sequel to the Emmy award winning Before Stonewall chronicles the history of gay life since 1969. It is narrated by Melissa Etheridge.
53	In November, 1993, a bag of porn tapes featuring teenage boys was found in a river near London, Canada. This discovery triggered a sensational investigation into child pornography, resulting in the arrest of over 60 London-area men. Yet members of the gay community began to
54	This short poetic film looks at the gap in between being in a relationship and being single again.
55	After the Revolution documents the effect sexual repression has had on gays and lesbians in the former Czechoslovakia. Maria Dunková and Sonia Pompová and other lesbian and gay couples tell how they found each other and the struggles they have gone through to maintain th
56	This deeply moving film reminds the world of the forgotten history of gay survivors of Nazi Germany. As many as 15,000 gay men were sent to concentration camps, targeted by the Nazis as subversives. In this powerful documentary, three gay survivors share their stories. The
57	While many historians have written about the Dutch Underground, the participation of gay and lesbian heroes has been virtually ignored. In this fascinating and emotional film, director Klaus Muller acknowledges these heroic contributions.
58	This beautifully bleak account of a Tokyo day-care worker's obsession with her roommate captures the bittersweet pain of unrequited love. Natsuko's coworker Etsuko asks her how she feels about men. "Not for me," she says, "I won't degrade myself." Based

"She'd never heard of mixed feelings," Jess tells us in voice-over. The screenplay, adapted by Jeanette Winterson from her own novel of the same title, is droll and endearing, frightening and funny—even while describing the perverted pedagogy of Christian cultists. It's a strange beginning of a life. Young Jess, ever observant and precocious, tells schoolmates that there are no toilets in hell. Later, she trots off to assist the "Society of the Last," her mother's odd evangelical group in a musical mission. they hold forth on the beach, but heathens throw sand into Miss Jewbury's accordion; she loses her F sharp. (Oranges has some of the best examples I've ever seen of older women characters who are nuanced, nurturing, and know how to survive). Part One ends as the looney Christians go off the deep end. The plots in Part Two not only gel, but thicken into a horrifying climax. Now teenage Jess meets the winsome Melanie, who works at a fish stall. They are immediately stuck on each other and, over a fish carcass, the schoolgirl crush is off and running. Jess is a great kisser on Saturday night and Sunday morning finds her locking eyes with Melanie singing "He Touched Me" at service. But the word is out among the faithful; Jess and Melanie are damned if not doomed. In saving them from the evils of lust, the Christians reveal themselves as true torturers.
